

people in Tahoe don't lock their doors, so you should be able to just bust right into their bedroom. Run in screaming how the aliens have landed and they are trying to exterminate the human race. Usher your neighbors into the dark isolated room and tell them to stay put and tell them you'll come and get them as soon as its safe for the human race to emerge.

While they're tucked away in a dark room for the winter, you'll have easy access to their firewood.

Helpful hints

- a. When you barge into your neighbor's room it would be helpful to make the area surrounding their bedroom window look as if it were under attack. Set a couple of small fires around their yard and it wouldn't hurt to set your roommate on fire and have them run through your neighbor's yard screaming. You should also be wearing a coat or shirt that looks like its been burned, remember you really need to sell the point that the end of the world is near.
- b. Lasers. It would be good to have your roommates shinning lasers and lights in through your neighbor's window when you run in, this will help sell the fact that the aliens have landed nearby.
- c. Don't forget to feed your neighbors all winter long. When spring hits you should really plan on moving or try to sell your neighbors on the fact that everyone's mind has been erased to forget the invasion; otherwise they'll be confused why everyone else spent their winter skiing/snowboarding and they spent theirs hiding in a cold basement.

4. The good ole', get them drunk technique

This one is hit or miss; it really depends on what type of drunk your neighbor is. If your neighbor is a happy drunk, you could go about this a few different ways. One- you could bring them over a 12-pack of PBR each night and hang out in their warm family room. But let's face it; you're not going to want to hang out with your neighbor every night. The best way to go about pulling this technique off is with our good old friend Jagermeister. After your neighbor is good and sauced, they should fall asleep relatively quick. Once they are passed out, steal about two to three days worth of firewood.

The next day when you see your neighbor you can tell them one of two things: one, they insisted you take home a bunch of firewood; or two, you tell them that they were so drunk they kept adding firewood on the fire all night.

Helpful hints

- a. If your neighbor is an angry drunk, see technique one through three.
- b. If you try and convince your neighbor that they used all of the wood in their own fireplace, make sure you break in early in the morning to fill their fireplace with a ton of ashes. Just empty the ashes from your fireplace into a bucket and take it next door.
- c. If you're going with the technique above, really pat their ego. Keep saying, "I've never seen a fire like that before. It was so hot I we were all sitting around in our T-shirts."
- d. If you try to convince them that they gave you the firewood, remember to bring them over a bottle of Jager to say thanks. This will also help you get your next round of firewood.
