

Jesus returns to endorse war on terrorism

Photos and story by Daniel Savickas

Since the beginning of the war on terrorism, President George W. Bush has boasted the backing of his willing and able coalition, his cabinet, the American people, and none other than God.

During his second term as President, George W. Bush has experienced a slight change in support. Bush has had to make some changes in high cabinet positions; members of his coalition, that actually have armies, have been scaling back or pulling their troops out of Iraq entirely; and back in the homeland, support for the military operation in Iraq is at an all-time low. But there is one place that President's support is as strong as ever, and that is with the Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

The President got his proof of this last week when Jesus, the son of God, came down from heaven to back up claims that the President is in fact on a mission from God.

At a press conference Jesus claimed, "I have come down to Washington D.C. to testify before your news media that President George W. Bush is on a mission from my Father to spread freedom and democracy throughout the world."

"When he said, his 'Father,' he's talking about God people," said the President. "The almighty, ah, you know, creator of heaven and earth."

When Jesus was asked about the insurgency in Iraq, which claims to be acting on behalf of their God, Allah, he simply scoffed at the question.

"There is only one true God, father almighty, creator of heaven and earth, all that is seen and unseen," said Jesus. "And when I say 'earth,' that means the Middle East as well."

After the press conference, Jesus accompanied Bush back to Crawford, Texas to finish out the President's vacation. On the way they stopped at a military base to meet with some 1,500 paratroopers which were just ordered to serve their second tour in Iraq. The soldiers are being sent to beef up security for the two national votes coming up in Iraq.

At the ranch Jesus helped the President with his chores of clearing brush, and even enjoyed a few rounds of golf.

Outside of the ranch, Cindy Sheehan, who's son Casey was killed in Iraq, continued her protest of the war and waited patiently for a meeting with the President. Sheehan began her protests after a week in which the Marines suffered many losses in Iraq. In a news conference the President claimed the soldiers died for, "a noble cause." Sheehan has been following the President around, and staking out his Crawford ranch, ever since, demanding to know what the "noble cause" is exactly.

In a statement released by the White House, Jesus addressed this mourning mother.

"When I died for the sin of man, my mother, Father rest her soul, did not protest against my father for allowing it to happen and or putting me in harms way. Great change requires great sacrifice," Jesus said. "Lately, since I've been back on earth, which my father created, and I don't want to hear any more about this 'scientology,' I've seen signs that say, 'Who would Jesus bomb?' Well, my brothers and sisters, Jesus would not bomb anyone. My father on the other hand, who created plagues and sent floods, is not so forgiving; and George has been sent to carry out these orders."

Back at the ranch, Jesus said he and the President are getting along famously.

"I understand and respect the position he has been put in," said Jesus. "I know what it's like to follow in the footsteps of a very powerful father. Although my Father never ran the country, I don't know if I've mentioned this, he did create it."

Jesus is expected to return to heaven later on this week, and thus far he claims to have no plans of returning three days later.

Top of page: Bush and Jesus meet with the troops. Middle left: Jesuse tells Bush not to lay up and go for the green. Middle right: Bush and Jesus at the press conference. Bottom: Jesus points to a tree that needs to be cut down.